Believe it or not, aside from your official portrait, we don't have many pics of just you that were taken close enough to work for something like Fox News. We can certainly stick to the official portrait if that is what you like.

I believe there are hundreds on our press distribution list. I will print off a list for you tomorrow. Some news outlets such as the Daily News and Ktuu receive the press releases in a general email address that can be accessed by everyone in the organization. I know what you are talking about and will look into this.

Sharon- who all is on our media press release recepient list? I'd like to see who received, for example, yesterday's presser we sent out right before 5pm re: Conoco's response.

There's something odd about a very vocal critic of our press releases and speeches - the person must receive the pressers before the general public sees them - because this critic posts them and spins our content into something negative everytime... and they're able to do this before the presser even gets printed or reported on in the mainstream media.
Thanks

My understanding was that there were non-media types on that press release mailing list also...and that it was a compilation of a few media lists (sounded like a mess last year when I tried to find Juneau-only media...gave up and just built one myself).

It'd be interesting to see what Sharon turns up. It'd be very easy for a mole to get on that list...they probably just emailed and asked to get on it.

There's a blogger named rfn. He started off as a big supporter, now he's a critic who picks and chooses what issues to support us on. This morning he posted the press release we sent out 4:45pm yesterday on Conoco"s response... and added that, essentially, I over-react and panic with responding via pressers -like it's a bad thing. How would this blogger have received the emailed presser unless he's a valid media person (and why would a legit media person bother to be a regular blogger?), or one of our folks sent it to him?

Strange thing is yesterday it was one of our folks who, as he does so often, warned me I'd again look like I was over-reacting... and he did not want any pressers going out... He cautions often that it doesn't do any good and even though he say he agrees with me that we should be communicating more often and clearer with the public, he is very, very hesitant to ever want pressers or statements going out in response to timely issues.

Trying to put two and two together here, trying to remember if this is the blogger who criticizes me but says very supportive things of a select few in the administration.

There's a blogger named rfn. He started off as a big supporter, now he's a critic who picks and chooses what issues to support us on. This morning he posted the press release we sent out 4:45pm yesterday on Conoco"s response... and added that, essentially, I over-react and panic with responding via pressers -like it's a bad thing. How would this blogger have received the emailed presser unless he's a valid media person (and why would a legit media person bother to be a regular blogger?), or one of our folks sent it to him?

Strange thing is yesterday it was one of our folks who, as he does so often, warned me I'd again look like I was over-reacting... and he did not want any pressers going out... He cautions often that it doesn't do any good and even though he say he agrees with me that we should be communicating more often and clearer with the public, he is very, very hesitant to ever want pressers or statements going out in response to timely issues.

Trying to put two and two together here, trying to remember if this is the blogger who criticizes me but says very supportive things of a select few in the administration.

Kris...did we know who rfn was?

My understanding was that there were non-media types on that press release mailing list also...and that it was a compilation of a few media lists (sounded like a mess last year when I tried to find Juneau-only media...gave up and just built one myself).

It'd be interesting to see what Sharon turns up. It'd be very easy for a mole to get on that list...they probably just emailed and asked to get on it.

On the press release distribution list, I'm sure that leg offices are on that list i.e. Speaker Harris, etc. But I wouldnt be surprised if there are people w/no need to be on there. Anxious to hear what SHaron says.

We were bummed too when we had to cancel. We have mtgs in DC, though, at the end of February with the Natl Gov's Association, including a couple of meetings and events with the President, and mtgs with the Feds on AGIA - and there was no way to squeeze in two trips to DC in the same month. The 90-day session puts even more pressure on me to stay in Juneau as often as possible during these three months. Believe me, we tried to figure out a way to do both Outside trips in one month, but with the huge criticism I receive for even leaving Juneau to attend weekend mtgs and events in other parts of Alaska (and it's our fellow Republicans who scream the loudest if I'm not in Juneau), there was no way to fly to the East coast twice in such a short time span.

I apologize for that - and did not know you were going to be a part of that first DC event. Sorry.

Hi! When I was back in D.C. early this month the NRA staff told me you were going to give the opening speech at the CPAC Convention the first week in February. They were quite thrilled that you were coming and asked me to tell them all about you. Later one of the Vice Presidents asked me if I would come to the Convention and introduce you. I happily agreed to do so. I was told that it was possible that Bush might come also (although I wasn't asked to introduce him). So they arranged for a ticket and a hotel for me. Then late this week they advised that you had a conflict and had to cancel. Bummer. They were quite disappointed and I know I was. I, of course, canceled my trip because I had plenty to do at the office and now nothing to do there. I had the start of a good introduction ready for you. Hopefully we both get to perform those chores sometime in the future. My best, WAR

Sharon- who all is on our media press release recepient list? I'd like to see who received, for example, yesterday's presser we sent out right before 5pm re: Conoco's response.

There's something odd about a very vocal critic of our press releases and speeches - the person must receive the pressers before the general public sees them - because this critic posts them and spins our content into something negative everytime... and they're able to do this before the presser even gets printed or reported on in the mainstream media.
Thanks
